Council questioned Chief Moore regarding his department being understaffed due to retiring officers. Chief Moore said his department is short of officers. He said he likes to have at least 60 full time officers on staff. He said his department is seven officers short from the latest retirement and that they are in the process of getting two more on board this week. Councilperson Jennings asked Chief Moore if it was possible to start training new officers as soon as someone is retiring. Chief Moore said he usually starts the process as soon as possible. Council President Stevenson said having officers retire was not entirely negative because young officers will now have a chance at mobility. Chief Moore said as a spot become vacant, officers get excited about the possibility of getting a promotion.
